Hostages threatened with 24-hour ultimatum

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — An American hostage said in a videotape dropped off by his kidnappers Sunday that he and three other men, including two Americans, will be killed if Israel fails to release 400 Arab prisoners within 24 hours.

A six-minute videotape showing Boston native Alann Steen, 47, was delivered to a Western news agency in the name of Islamic Jihad for the Liberation of Palestine, which kidnapped Steen and three others from the campus of Beirut University College on Jan. 24.

The group's other hostages are Robert Polhill, 53, of New York City; Jesse Turner, 39, of Boise, Idaho; and Mithileshwar Singh, 60, a native of India and resident alien in the United States.

Israel indicated Sunday it was willing to discuss the swap of an Israeli airman missing in Lebanon for the release of the 400 Arab prisoners, a proposal advanced Saturday by Nabih Berri, head of the main Shiite Amal militia and Lebanon's justice minister.

However, Israeli officials said in Jerusalem they would not respond to an ultimatum and would not conduct such talks in public.

Under Berri's proposal, all foreign hostages also would be released in Lebanon by the various extremist groups holding them.

Berri, meanwhile, backed away Sunday from an earlier weekend statement that Anglican Church hostage-negotiator Terry Waite would be freed by Monday, now saying the release would take more time. Waite has been missing since Jan. 20.

A weary-looking Steen, reading from a statement in a monotone, said on Sunday's

Gay Awareness Week begins

By Jill Zuccardy
Daily Campus Staff

Panel discussions, movies, a dance and "Gay Jeans Day" are among the events planned for Gay Awareness Week, which begins here today.

The Gay and Lesbian Association, organizing the event with assistance from the Health Center and the Women's Center, hopes that the week's activities will "help give a better understanding of homosexuality to all UConn students, both straight and gay," according to a newsletter put out by the group.

"We want to promote awareness (of homosexuality) by both the heterosexual population and the gay/lesbian population," said the president of the association, who asked that his name not be printed.

This is the third time in the past eight years an awareness program has been held. The group's president said he expects 60-90 people to attend the events.

The activities begin at today at noon with "We Are Here, Too," a panel of gay students from UConn, Amherst and Trinity colleges comparing university awareness and support of the campus homosexual population. At 7 p.m., there will be a showing of "We Are Family," a movie about gay and lesbian couples who have adopted or have custody of children.

On Tuesday, a panel of gay professionals will discuss being homosexual in the working world and Wednesday will feature the movie "Before Stonewall," a film about the beginning of gay liberation.

Wednesday has also been designated "Gay Jeans Day" by the assocation. According to the group's president, this idea came from other colleges' gay organizations with which the group is in contact.

UConn women—Playboy wants you!

Playboy magazine is looking for women of the nation's "10 best party colleges" to appear in a pictorial scheduled for its October 1987 issue, Elizabeth Norris, a spokeswoman for the magazine, said. UConn was ranked as sixth in the nation in the January 1987 Playboy poll , with California State University at Chico ranked first.

For the last 10 years, Playboy photographers have visited major college athletic conferences — such as the Big 10, Pac10, and ACC—to recruit women for its annual back-to-campus issue pictorial. "Women of the Ivy League" were featured in October 1986.

Jeff Cohen, Playboy's managing editor, said, "This year we want to give other colleges an opportunity to show that they have coeds every bit as beautiful as women at the big conference schools." He said they have had requests from students from the "top party colleges" to "check out" their schools because they have great-looking women. "We think those women will be proud to represent their schools in this year's multi-page pictorial," he said.

Students at UConn have varying opinions about Playboy's proposal.

Greenwich woman aided Contra drive

WASHINGTON (AP) — Fired White House aide Oliver L. North met several times, including over dinner, with a wealthy state woman who bankrolled at least part of a pro-Contra lobbying drive, the woman has acknowledged.

The meetings with Barbara Newington of Greenwich, suggest a close link between North and the efforts of Mrs. Newington's friend, Carl "Spitz" Channell, to put together a costly public relations blitz.

Channell, through a network of conservative groups he controls, financed speaking trips by Nicaraguan rebels and a television ad campaign of at least $1 million that targeted congressional opponents of President Reagan's plan to give $100 million in military and other aid to the Contras.

The source of the funding has come into question, with congressional and federal investigators examining a report in the Lowell (Mass.) Sun that North provided profits from Iranian arms sales for the campaign.

Although he has denied that Iranian money was used in the media effort or that North solicited contributions, Channell has acknowledged that North spoke to groups of his contributors and provided written material that was used in the ad campaign backing Reagan's Contra and defense policies.

STATE

Trooper dropouts rise

BLOOMFIELD, (AP) — State police officials say they're unsure why the dropout rate at the department's training academy has soared from 18 percent to 40 percent since 1983, but they're taking steps to reverse the trend.

Less than three weeks after the department's 96th class began training, 51 of the 163 recruits and alternates have dropped out. Last year, 40 percent left in the first month of training.

Maj. Joseph A. Perry Jr., who oversees recruitment, hopes to start psychological testing of prospective recruits in June to weed out those who don't want to be troopers badly enough to survive the boot-camp regimen of the State Police Academy.

"A lot of people, as much as they want to be troopers, aren't fully prepared psychologically, physically or emotionally," Perry said last week. "They've never been in a stressful environment.

"You have to want the job," he said. "A lot of them say they want it but they don't truly want it."

Rolando Centeno of New Britain, who left this year's class, agreed that most recruits who drop out aren't prepared psychologically for the disciplined environment of the academy.

"When they get there it's like hitting a brick wall," said the 26-year-old police officer at Central Connecticut State University.

Those in charge of the academy, which this year is being run on the stately campus of St. Thomas Seminary because the department's Meriden complex isn't large enough to accommodate the class, say they're not especially concerned by the attrition rate.

"If you came in here and found it was an easy place to get through, we'd be embarrassed," said Lt. Douglas Hanahan, the academy's commandant.

NATION

U.S. intelligence fails, according to report

WASHINGTON (AP) — Despite a flurry of serious spy cases in recent years, the U.S. intelligence apparatus is almost lackadaisical about guarding the nation's most sensitive secrets, according to a new congressional assessment.

The House Intelligence Committee, in terms far harsher than those used by its Senate counterpart in a similar report last year, found "a litany of disaster" and called for major overhauls reaching deep into the counterspy bureaucracy.

"Our hope is that the criticism will be taken as drawing attention to something that needs to be improved," said Rep. Louis Stokes, D-Ohio, the new chairman of the committee. "We hope the executive branch will clean up its act."

Among the panel's findings were:

— Carelessness in hiring for sensitive intelligence posts. For example, the CIA hired Edward Howard, who seriously damaged the agency's operations in Moscow by giving secrets to the Soviets, despite "an extensive history of using hard drugs."

— Failure to take seriously the implications of the arrests of 27 U.S. citizens for spying from 1984 to 1986.

— A relaxation of strictures that should govern the most highly classified information. "There seems to be a widespread attitude within some U.S. intelligence agencies that once an employee has been granted a Top Secret clearance...strict adherence to the 'need to know' principle is not required," the panel said.

— Relatively indiscriminate issuance of security clearances. Of 200,000 applications for Top Secret status in 1984, only 1 percent were denied. Currently more than 5 milion Americans hold some level of security clearance.

Phillipine truce ends; no new talks scheduled

MANILA, Philippines (AP) — A 60-day truce with Communist rebels formally expired Sunday without hope of extension, and the government said it would step up military patrols while pursuing peace talks on a regional level.

A rebel umbrella group urged its members to "wage militant and unremitting struggles on all fronts." Some groups have said they opposed regional talks.

The head of the committee that monitored compliance with the cease-fire urged President Corazon Aquino to intervene to prevent a civil war.

The truce had paved the way for peace talks in January, but the negotiations were suspended indefinitely Jan. 30 after the rebels accused the government of acting in bad faith.

The government responded by saying it would not agree to an extension of the cease-fire unless the rebels agreed to resume "substantial negotiations" to end the 18-year insurrection.

The rebels said new talks would be fruitless because the new constitution, approved last week, imposed too many limitations on what is negotiable.

Since the talks ended, at least 22 people have died in scattered clashes. No reports surfaced of fighting Sunday.

In announcing the end of the truce, chief government negotiator Teofista Guingona blamed "a hardline posture of a few Communist leaders."

Guingona said he would seek talks with local rebel groups to save the peace initiative, the cornerstone of Mrs. Aquino's policy of national reconciliation.

"The government will keep the door to peace open but will cede to unwarranted demands. It will pursue reconciliation with honor but will never yield to inordinate conditions," he said.

Metheny not SUBOG's first choice band

By Kathleen Brett
Daily Campus Staff

Pat Metheny, a jazz musician scheduled to play at Saturday's Winter Weekend Carnival was not the Student Union Board of Governor's first concert choice, according to President Marc Greenberg.

Rock musician Eddie Money was tentatively scheduled to play Winter Weekend, Greenberg said. "He was never booked but we were counting on having him play. Eddie Money canceled on Christmas Eve after scheduling a self-promoting, video-type tour Feb. 19, 20 and 21. Our choices were either no concert or Pat Metheny. Any other acts we had previously considered were already booked by Christmas Eve. Basically we were stuck holding the bag," said Greenberg.

According to Thomas Hanley, chairman of the Concert Committe, Metheny is the top jazz performer in America. "Tickets are selling very briskly and we're hoping for a sold-out show," said Hanley. Hanley would not comment on the other potential Winter Weekend acts, saying, "I don't see how revealing that type of information would benefit anyone. It would only produce bad feelings. If students are interested in what acts may be playing at UConn, they are more than welcome to attend to the Concert Committee meetings held in the Student Union. The more student input we get, the better."

The Metheny concert is scheduled for 8 p.m. Saturday in Jorgensen Auditorium.

videotape: "If our lives are important to America, it must order Israel to release the 400 Palestinians as soon as possible — that is, Monday as a maximum.

"We also tell America that if it commits any stupidity, we will be prone to be killed. Besides, Americans in the whole world will be the victims of our adminstration's stupidity.

"They (the captors) do not fear death because they perceive it as the start of their life, in other words, America can't scare them through its military actions," the statement said.

Steen wore eyeglasses and a small beard grown in captivity. A text of the statement in his own handwriting was delivered along with the tape.

Earlier Sunday, another group holding foreign hostages claimed that Waite had carried a transmitter to pinpoint suspected terrorist hideouts for an American military attack on Lebanon.

Since Waite disappeared nearly three weeks ago, during a mission to seek freedom for foreign hostages, there have been rumors that he was being held against his will. But the Church of England has said it could not confirm that.

The Beirut newspaper L'Orient Le Jour claimed Waite had been released and would surface Sunday in the Syrian-occupied Bekaa Valley in eastern Lebanon. Police said they could not confirm the report.

Secretary of State George Shultz, asked how the United States would respond if American hostages were killed, told ABC-TV: "I'm not going to try to forecast it."

Another group of hostage-holders, the Revolutionary Justice Organization, delivered a statement Sunday to the Beirut newspaper An-Nahar, accompanied by a photograph of American hostage Edward Austin Tracy, who was abducted Oct. 21.

The picture showed a smiling Tracy, 56, formerly of Burlington, Vt., in a dark blue track suit.

The statement said the United States planned an imminent air and sea landing in two residential districts of Moslem west Beirut to seize prominent leaders of Hezbollah, a group of pro-Iranian Shiite extremists, and swap them for foreign hostages.

Car destroys information booth

By Jim Amspacher
Daily Campus Staff

The university information booth near Mirror Lake was demolished early Friday morning when a car went out of control, flew through the air and smashed into it.

The driver of the car was slightly injured.

The information booth, on a small driveway off Mansfield Road across from von der Mehden Recital Hall near the corner of Route 195, was left a pile of bricks, twisted metal and broken glass.

Gregory John Konan, the driver of the car and an eighth-semester pharmacy student of 58 Ferncrest Drive, East Hartford, was taken to Windham Community Memorial Hospital by the UConn Fire Department ambulance, according to police. He reportedly sustained a small cut on his left ring finger.

The accident occured at about 1:12 a.m., according to an incomplete report by Officer Darlene Lauren. The report says Konan lost control of his 1979 two-door Chevy Malibu and hit a curb before flying through the air and hitting the booth.

Johnson hosts radio show

By Dave Clark
Daily Campus Staff

"Radio Free Connecticut", a WHUS public affairs show about political issues affecting UConn, will premeire this semester on Monday with "Ignorance and AIDS" hosted by student trustee Geoff Johnson.

The half-hour show will be broadcast every Monday at 6:30 p.m. Last semester's host, Rich Rapp, will alternate as host with Johnson. Johnson's shows will deal with political issues with state-wide implications, and Rapp's will deal with campus issues.

"We'll be covering controversial issues, but we're looking to present the facts, not to sensationalize," Johnson said. "These issues are often exploited in the media, and we want to give them a fair chance here."

"We want to give listeners the best of both worlds," Rapp said. "We want to present the big picture and the little picture."

In addition to the AIDS show, Johnson is planning to cover the topics of racism, teen pregnancy, higher education, and unaffiliated voters being allowed to vote in party primaries.

Rapp's show next Monday will cover the Metanoia on world peace scheduled for April 22. "I want to talk to the student volunteers, University officials, and I want to do a roving mike segment and talk to students around campus," Rapp said. "Students views are important."

He is also planning to discuss the Middle East oil crisis and President Reagan's Strategic Defense Initiative, otherwise known as Star Wars.

"I want to have interviews with UConn professors," Rapp said. "There is a wealth of information here that hasn't been aired."

For Monday's show on AIDS, acquired immune deficiency syndrome, Johnson has interviewed a representative of the State Department of Public Health, a gay student on campus, and State Senator Cynthia Mathews, co-chairman of the Public Health Committee.

Johnson said there is legislation before the Public Health Committee which would require health centers to supply local health officials with the names of people who test positive for AIDS antibody.

"This has broad implications for stemming the spread of the disease," Johnson said. "Some people who fear that they have the antibody won't go to get tested for fear of what might happen if word somehow gets out. This is just exacerbating homophobia."

Johnson and Rapp are both recent graduates of UConn and had experience at WHUS as undergraduates. Johnson is currently a field coordinator for the state Democratic party. They are both volunteering their time to work on Radio Free Connecticut.

Retreat attempts to bring UConn community together

By David Ushery
Campus Correspondent

More interaction between the different segments of the UConn community and a recommended freshmen seminar geared toward helping new students adjust to university life were just two aspects discussed in a retreat held Saturday at the Hemlocks Educational Center in Hebron.

The retreat was held to bring together students, faculty, staff, trustees, and members of President John T. Casteen's cabinet for a day of informal discussion and interaction at UConn.

Casteen requested the retreat as part of an effort to foster solid interaction between various parts of the UConn community. Throughout the day, participants shared their thoughts about UConn's future as an institution of higher learning, offering various perspectives on what is wrong and what is right with the university.

Afternoon workshops consisted of discussions about curriculum reform, drug abuse, multi-culturalism, and athletics.

Counseling for students as well as athletes was discussed, with students' saying that "regular students" at the university also deserved help with their studies.

Approximately 60 people attended the retreat, which was coordinated by a committee appointed by Casteen.

In addition to providing a forum for issues of importance, the day also gave students and administration a chance to get to know each other and put faces with names. Many of those who attended hoped the retreat would become an annual event.

UConn tutors sought for Windham Heights program

By Kevin Kleinbardt
Daily Campus Staff

A tutoring program to help minority students in Windham Heights, Willimantic, is officially starting this week.

The program, headed by UConn graduate Fred Archoleo and outlined by the Windham Heights Community Center, has been set up to help high school students with schoolwork and keep them from dropping out.

The tutors are volunteers from the community and UConn, mostly with backgrounds in math, English, Spanish, education and sociology. Archoleo urges anyone interested to volunteer.

Archoleo said he likes working with volunteers because "they are not held back [like paid tutors]. They are there because they want to be and are able to work together."

He stressed the importance of good student-tutor relations. "Tutors must be able reach out," he said. The program is different from other tutoring centers, which usually have a one-on-one tutor-student relationship. Because of lack of funds and since the program is new, it will be run on a clinical, in/out basis until it is more established.

Archoleo called the work "A Band-aid effort" because it is able only to reach a few, and it is a repairative rather thatn preventative program. "It's like a hole in a void, with us dropping a thread and trying to pull out a few people," he said.

"This is a problem everywhere," he said, "not just Windham Heights, and we are learning to hit the problems of the working class head on...and we are seeing how inadequetly the government has treated its people."

He called the work challenging, but felt restrained since "there is only enough funding to pay for 13 hours of work, so I end up working much more on my own time" he said. "But I don't mind that, the hard part is when I'm done, there is still more work to do, and it's very hard to leave it."

The association's advertisements for "Gay Jeans Day" tell students that wearing jeans does not mean they are gay; it means they are "willing to accept others for who they are."

On Thursday evening, the topic "Coming Out To Your Parents" will be addressed by a panel of parents from Parents and Friends of Lesbians and Gays, a Hartford-based group. On Friday, the association is sponsoring a dance in the Student Union.

In addition to the scheduled activities, the association's office, which includes a library of books on homosexual topics and pamphlets on AIDS, will be open all week from noon to 7 p.m.

...Greenwich woman donates funds

Mrs. Newington, Channell's mysterious benefactor, has also given money to conservative political candidates, such as extremist presidential candidate Lyndon LaRouche and the late Rep. Larry McDonald, D-Ga. Mrs. Newington, a widow and daughter of a six-term mayor of Hastings, N.Y., declined in an interview to discuss her finances or the source of her wealth.

According to documents on file with the state of Virginia, she was the principal contributor to one of Channell's organizations, the Virginia-based American Conservative Trust State Election Fund.

Of about $700,000 raised by the fund in three years, Mrs. Newington is listed as giving $324,800. The bulk of the money Channell collected, however, went into his tax-exempt groups whose contributors are kept secret, so Mrs. Newington's total donations to Channell's operations cannot be determined.

Debra Logan, a sixth semester student, said she does not believe it is a bad idea to pose. "There's nothing wrong with it [posing]," she said, "but I wouldn't do it."

Tom Tedford, a fifth semester student, said, "I guess it's all right [posing]. I don't see how UConn was ranked as the number six party school, though." As for women posing nude, "I think it's pretty cheap," he said. "Semi-nude and clothed, it's okay." He said he would not appreciate it if his girlfriend posed. "I think it's kind of degrading and puts women as a symbol."

"Our students are perfectly free to do what they want to do," Carol Wiggins, vice president for student affairs, said. "I tend to think that Playboy is making a lot out of nothing." Wiggins said the university has no control over the students. "If they want to participate, that's up to them." They will not be representing UConn but themselves, she said.

Kevin Leahy said he thinks the women who pose will be representing the university. "It's their choice," he said, "but I wouldn't be too happy if my sister posed."

Some students believe UConn has received enough publicity concerning ineligible athletes, and that posing for Playboy would add to the negative image.

Kathy Olmstead said she believes it would be degrading to pose for the magazine. "I don't think it would be very good publicity," she said. "We do have the all-male review, so it kind of goes both ways, but I know my boyfriend wouldn't go for it."

Joe Bittner said he thinks its "pretty good" that UConn was chosen. "They do all the other major universities, and I think it's given UConn some respect." If his sister posed, though, "it's not too good, but it's up to her," he said.

Roni Bealer, a second semester student, said she would consider posing, "but not nude." She said she does not believe it is degrading to women, but "guys will treat the women differently [after they have posed] because they assume too much," she said.

Barbi Steinhilber said she does not believe that women would be treated differently. She said posing is not degrading to women, but "I wouldn't pose."

Playboy photographer David Chan will interview candidates for the pictorial from now until mid-May. Chan's first three stops will be at the University of Miami, Coral Gables [February 6-13]; California State University, Chico; and San Diego State University [dates to come].

Norris said the magazine is deciding which universities and colleges to visit based on the weather, spring breaks and final exams. Chan does not know when he will be coming to UConn, she said.

To qualify, women must be at least 18 years old and registered as a full- or part-time student at the school listed in the "top10 party colleges."

Super algae lecturer speaks Tuesday

Daryl Kollman, scientist, teacher and founder of Cell Tech, will be lecturing at the Living Learning Center, Vinton dormitory in Towers, at 7:30 p.m. Tuesday, February 10.

Kollman has been working with learning disabled children for 13 years. He believes many of them suffer from disabilities due to improper nutrition, which lead him to his search for "nature's most perfect food."

His work showed that in Japan certain micro algae are being used for the remediation of education difficulties related to diet. In 1976 he began producing and experimenting with spirulina. Subsequently a superior form of algae, Super Blue Green, scientifically known as Aphanizomen Flosaqua, was discovered to be growing naturally and in abundance in Klamath Lake, Oregon.

Kollman will be talking about his research, direct experience and the experience of others relating to the use of Super Blue Green Algae. Many people have reported to have experienced increased physical and mental energy, stress reduction and improved memory.

The algae is currently being researched by the Nutrition Department at UConn.

Pennsylvania pair named longest married couple

WEST KITTANNING, Pa. (AP)—Almost 81 years after they paid 50 cents for a marriage licence and said "I do," Calvin and Mina Dunmire are calmly accepting the fuss that comes with being named the nation's longest married couple.

"There's no secret to it. We just lived happily together," Dunmire, 105, explained at the couple's southwestern Pennsylvania home, glancing at his wife, silent in her rocking chair.

"Mrs. just did the housework, and I did the outside work. That was all there was to it," he said Saturday. "It wasn't luck. We just loved each other."

To the best of Dunmire's recollection, he and his wife, who will soon be 101, have never had an argument since their marriage on April 24, 1906, across the Allegheny River in Kittanning.

"We just enjoy each other, that's all," he said.

It's not that they're so much alike, said Paul Dunmire, 80, their only surviving child. It's that they complement one another so well.

Until she suffered some strokes and he slowed down, she ran the household while he ran his lumber, natural gas and banking businesses.

Theirs is the kind of commitment Worldwide Marriage Encounter, a religion-oriented organization that sponsors marriage enrichment weekends, hoped to find in its third annual search for the nation's longest married couple.

"Society needs to step back once a year and collectively tip our hats to people who are husband and wife and who are going through better and worse and through thick and thin," said Tom Gorman of San Diego. He and his wife Jeanne are this year's national coordinators for

Oh Vanna ...

CHICAGO (AP)—"Wheel of Fortune" personality Vanna White willl be the subject of a Playboy magazine pictorial this spring, a Playboy spokeswoman said Sunday.

The pictures of White, the well-known woman of letters on the syndicated game show, will appear in the May issue of the magazine, said Robyn L. Radomski, Playboy's director of corporate communications.

"I haven't seen the pictures yet because I have been out of town, but I can assure you they will be tasteful, quality shots," Radomski said.

Radomski said she understood White posed in lingerie for several of the pictures.

Bottoms up

MACON, Ga. (AP)—Officials at Mercer University, already blushing over the "party school" accolade bestowed on the Baptist institution by Playboy magazine, are hoping its students won't take up Playboy's latest offer.

Playboy announced last month that Mercer, which doesn't allow drinking on campus, made the No. 9 spot on its list of top party colleges.

Last week, the men's magazine said it would seek models for its annual back-to-school issue this October from the top 10.

"I think we have a fine population of bright young women, and I would not anticipate what their response would be," Emily Myers, vice president for university relations and development, said Saturday. "We would hope they would choose not to be interested."

She said school administrators were "totally surprised and shocked at the listing, as I think most of the students were."

The selection, based in part on other students' votes, "might have been a sort of prank" by students at other schools in Georgia, she said.

California State University at Chico was No. 1 on the list.

... 81 years of marriage

World Marriage Day, the second Sunday of February.

The search for the nation's longest married couple is far from official. Couples are nominated by relatives and friends as well as local Worldwide Marriage Encounter groups.

With 82 years and three months of marriage, last year's winners, Oliver and Cora Lee Glenn of Elmore, Ala., are still technically the nation's longest living married couple, according to Worldwide Marriage Encounter. But the Groamans and other organizers decided that rather than honor the couple again, it would be better to spread the glory.

Mrs. Glenn, who turns 100 on Valentine's Day, and her 100-year-old husband still are reeling from the reaction to last year's announcement. For months strangers showed up at the Merry Wood Lodge nursing home, hoping to talk to the couple and pose for pictures.

The Dunmires would just as soon do without that commotion. They enjoy the quiet, orderly lives they lead with their full-time housekeeper and a cat, Andy.

And besides, Dunmire doesn't have the time.

"I've got office work to do here, gas meters to read," he said.

"That keeps me busy, especially at the end of the month."

Here comes the judge

LONDON (AP)—At least one judge says he can do with a little less respect.

Courtroom jargon such as "utmost respect," "verily" and "humbly" is archaic, confusing and often plain dishonest, says Christopher Staughton, a judge in the Commercial Court.

Verily "has been obsolete in ordinary speech almost since the Authorized Version of the Bible," Staughton wrote in the current edition of Counsel, a quarterly legal journal.

"Do not 'crave' leave to do anything, but just ask it," he advised lawyers who appear before the bench.

"The words 'humbly' and 'respectfully' are as unnecessary in affidavits, and generally as untruthful, as they are in oral argument," Staughton said.

A statement prefaced with "with great respect" really means "You are wrong," the judge said. And if a lawyer says "with utmost respect," he really is saying, "Send for the men in the white coats."

Basic training

LOS ANGELES (AP)—Actor Willem Dafoe says his crash course in foot soldiering before the filming of the movie "Platoon" is as close to war as he wants to get.

"It was like an initiation," the 31-year-old Dafoe said of two weeks of sleeping in the jungle, patrolling and mock ambushes.

Dafoe protrays the sergeant Elias in Oliver Stone's drama about U.S. soldiers in Vietnam. The director insisted the cast get a taste of soldiering before filming began in the Philippines.

"It's a good thing we didn't have Odorama (which allows use of the sense of smell during movie-viewing), or everybody would have run out of the theater. We stank."

Mikado at Jorgensen: comedy of Far East

— A wandering minstrel in love with a young girl.

— An outrageous law against flirting that can lead to death if broken.

— A wedding, and a dead man who is very much alive.

The confusing and fun tale of The Mikado will be presented by the New York Gilbert & Sullivan Players at Jorgensen Auditorium on Thursday, February 12 at 8:00 p.m.

The story begins in the Town of Titipu. Here we meet Nanki-Poo, a wandering minstrel, who is in love with Yum-Yum. Her guardian, Ko-Ko, however, has forbidden her to marry because of the Mikado's law against flirting of which Ko-Ko himself is guilty. Yum-Yum, bent on suicide, is talked into marrying Nanki-Poo on the condition that he will be axed at the end of the month. What follows is both amusing and strange. The Mikado has all the Gilbertian sense of humour, with plenty of vitality and frequent gleeful surprise.

The New York Gilbert & Sullivan Players is a full-time repertory company that has been presenting Gilbert & Sullivan in their traditional form since 1974. Their beautifully staged and costumed productions, featuring full chorus and orchestra, have garnered outstanding reviews from the press and brought joyous laughter to audiences young and old. As The New York Times said, "There is still plenty of life in the Gilbert & Sullivan canon when presented with such respect, affection, and talent." The New York Gilbert & Sullivan Players have become an important cultural force and are fast becoming the premiere Gilbert & Sullivan company in the United States.

Tickets for the Thursday evening, February 12 performance of The Mikado are $15, 13.50, 10 and 5, with discounts available for students and senior citizens. Tickets may be purchased at the Jorgensen Box Office Monday - Friday, 9-4, or may be purchased by phone (Master and VisaCard customers only) Monday - Friday, 9-8. Tickets may also be purchased at all Ticketron outlets. For more information, call the Box Office at 486-4226.

Compiled illustrators at Atrium

The illustrative work of six prominent artists from across the United States will be displayed Feb. 9-27 at the Atrium Gallery.

Two of the artists are scheduled to present lectures accompanied by slides at the gallery. Polish-born Andrzej Dudzinski will speak Wednesday, Feb. 18, 3:30 p.m., and New York Times and Boston Globe illustrator Frances Jetter will talk at the Atrium Tuesday, Feb. 24, 3:30 p.m. Refreshments will be served after both talks, which are free and open to the public.

Historically, illustration as an art form has encountered condescending criticism from many self-proclaimed "pure" artists whose work was not created for commercial purposes, according to Atrium Gallery Director Sal Scalora. In recent years, Scalora says, that criticism has largely disappeared as the public has grown to recognize the skill displayed in illustrations for posters, record album covers, billboards, and magazine and newspaper articles.

"Just because an artist is commissioned to produce a piece of art to illustrate, a product that is for sale, that doesn't mean it's any less a work of art," says Scalora. "When Time magazine or some other publication like that wants a cover illustration, it's not uncommon for the editor to ask several artists to submit artwork, and then they pick the best one on the same basis that experts in the field judge art."

The illustrations in this show at the Atrium Gallery are originals, as drawn or painted by the artists. An annual exhibit, the illustration show is "always one of our most popular," Scalora says. The fact that two of the artists will come to UConn to lecture is a plus, he added.

Dudzinski, one of the lecturing artists, is recognized as a fine artist, poster designer, author of children's books, a stage designer, and a celebrated cartoonist. Atlantic magazine, the Boston Globe, GQ, Vanity Fair and Vogue have all used his illustrations. His latest one-man show was in 1983 at the National Theatre in London.

Jetter, the other lecturer scheduled to speak at UConn, has been illustrating for 12 years, primarily in linocut. Her work has been reviewed in the prestigious illustrator's journal Graphis and in Idea magazine.

The other illustrators in the Atrium show are: Marshall Arisman, who teaches at the famed School of Visual Arts in New York City and who has exhibited in France, Poland, Belgium, Japan, and in New York and California; Dagmar Frinta, the daughter of two Czechoslovakian artists, a teacher at the Rhode Island School of Design, and an illustrator for Rolling Stone, New England, Time and other national publications.

Also in the Atrium show are Brad Holland and Matt Mahurin. Holland's early career saw him working in such diverse roles as an illustrator in a Chicago tatoo parlor and in the Kansas City headquarters of Hallmark Cards. His illustrations have appeared in Science 85, Yo Yo, New York Times Magazine, Mother Jones and others. Mahurin's work has

Like it or not, Playboy has right to recruit

Just when you thought it was safe to go back to the newsstand...

Yes, UConn will once again grace the pages of Playboy magazine. However, this time it will not be on a Top Ten Party School list. Rather, the attraction will be representatives of the female population in various stages of dress.

It had appeared that the initial excitement about the article in January's Playboy which named UConn as the sixth party school in the nation had subsided. But, Friday, Playboy announced that for its October issue, college women representing the schools on their list will pose for the Back-to-School issue. The stages of dress will range from fully clad to partial nudity to the full birthday suit.

In order to find suitable models, Playboy photographers will be on campus during the coming months to recruit UConn women. They will be looking for women who fit a certain category (we guess, proper physical features) and who, for a price are willing to appear in the men's magazine.

We are sure that the prospect of Playboy's campus-wide recruitment will raise some eyebrows, and perhaps some voices, around campus. The question of how the publicity will affect UConn's reputation—especially if some women appear completely nude—will surely be the subject of heated debate.

As long as there has been material, such as Playboy, which deals with sexuality in a graphic and descriptive manner, labels such as exploitive and sexist have been used. Undoubtedly, some people will complain that Playboy should not be allowed on campus and women should avoid participating in the recruitment drives.

However, Playboy has every right to search for models, be it at UConn, Yale or anywhere. It is up to the individual women to decide what is morally right and wrong.

It is almost impossible to gauge public reaction until the actual magazine is published. Some groups will protest, but the general student population will probably not think twice about it.

Reagan diary not very juicy

Since it came out that President Reagan keeps a personal diary, congressmen have suggested that he show it to investigators to help them unravel the Iran arms deal.

Now he has agreed to let them peek at certain parts. But I'm afraid they are going to be disappointed.

A White House source has shown me the diary. And it's clear that the President was innocent of wrongdoing.

For example, there is the first mention of Iran and arms during August 1985:

"Poindexter came in and asked me what I thought of an idea to sell arms to Iran. I told him it was OK with me.

"Later, I told Nancy that I was surprised to learn that there were Iranians who didn't have any arms. It must have something to do with their diet and is a terrible thing. Without arms, how do they eat or comb their hair or switch channels on the TV?

"Anyway, I called Poindexter and said: 'I think it would show the world how compassionate we are if we not only sell them arms, but if any of them need legs, we should make those available, too.' He just laughed. He's kind of a strange person. "Later in August, there was another entry on the subject:

"Poindexter was in again and I asked him where he planned on getting the arms he was going to sell to Iran.

"He said that our military had stockpiled spare parts of all kinds. I was amazed to hear that, and I asked where the Pentagon got them. He said that there are a lot of companies that manufacture them.

"That was a new one on me. I knew that we had made great advances in natural-looking hairpieces and even artificial hearts, but I didn t know we were that far along in producing arms. Isn t American technology amazing? I remember as a young man how hard it was for people to get a set of dentures that didn t look like piano keys.

"Later, I mentioned this to Nancy and told her how far we ve advanced since I starred in 'King's Row' and lost my legs. Nancy smiled and told me it was time for my nap."

Several months later, we find this entry:

"Ollie North came in to see me about the arms. I told him that if we're going to sell them all those arms, it might be good for the economy if we offered them a deal on long-sleeved shirts, too, and maybe gloves. He just kind of nodded. I like somebody who is a good listener."

A few weeks later, the subject came up again:

"Poindexter and North were here and they said the plans to ship arms to Iran were going well. But I warned them about some things we must be careful about.

"I told them that if somebody needs a right arm, we don t want to make a mistake and give them a left arm. Or if somebody needs two arms, we must be careful not to put them on the wrong sides. That could really cause a person a lot of problems in tying his shoelaces or zipping up his fly. They just nodded. That Poindexter is a good listener, too.

"Later, I mentioned this to Nancy. She told me it was time for my nap."

Then came an entry that said:

"The shipments have begun. I was really surprised at how many planeloads of arms we sent. I hope those planes are well refrigerated. I also asked Poindexter and North: 'This is amazing. Why do they need so many?' They told me that it s because of the war with Iraq. Of course. I should have known. There are always a lot of disabled vets in something like that.

"Later, I told Nancy that if we ever get on friendly terms with Iran, and we visit there, a lot of Iranians would be at the airport waving at us with arms that are tattooed: 'Made in the U.S.A.' She told me that it was time for my nap."

And there is this entry:

"North and Poindexter came in and asked me what I thought of their idea to take the money the Iranians gave us for the arms and pass it along to the contras. I asked them why, and they said the contras desperately need arms, too. They said some contra groups out there in the jungle don't have any arms.

"Well, that was a real shocker. At least with one arm, a fella could use a pistol. But with no arms, about all he could do is bite. So I told them to go ahead. How can somebody be expected to fight a war with just their teeth?

"Later I told Nancy about it and asked her how the heck does somebody with no arms in a jungle scratch a mosquito bite? Those contras must really be tough. She told me it was time for my nap."

Powerful Platoon leaves many shaken

War hath no fury like a non-combatant.
-C.E. Montague

You couldn't help but notice the blank faces.

As the doors to the early showing of the movie Platoon swung open, 225 people filed out of the theatre. They weren't talking, they weren't laughing. Only four people had smiles on their face, and that was only because they'd seen friends waiting in line, with me, for the second show.

A bearded man in his late fourties, face cast down at the ground, made his way through the crowd, and when his head came up, a slight glimmer of light caught the tear streaming down his face.

I'd heard and read that the movie was a moving experience. Words like "powerful" found their way into every review, and some had called Platoon, a film about the American experience in Vietnam, the best war movie ever made.

The film had received Golden Globe awards for Best Drama Picture of 1986, and Best Director, awarded to Oliver Stone, a Vietnam veteran who wrote the script over ten years ago. Platoon, said Stone, was the first film to show what the Vietnam War was really like from the perspective of a foot soldier, a "grunt."

Surrounded by a near-capacity crowd, it was almost eerie to sit in the middle of the theatre. Because for the first time in my life, I heard something that I'd never heard before when in the company of a large audience: utter silence.

Nobody yelled at the screen, nobody left to go to the lobby. There was one outburst by a teenage girl halfway through the movie, when a scar-faced Sgt. Barnes, played nobly by Tom Berenger, held a .45 pistol to the head of a young Vietnamese girl living in a village accused of aiding the Viet Cong. The teenager yelled out "No, oh God no, don't do it."

The movie follows the tour of Chris, played by Charlie Sheen, who dropped out of college to enlist in the army and fight in the War. The story is told through the actions of Chris, and in his audible letters home to his grandmother.

Through his eyes we see the mistreatment of black soldiers and the utter confusion of night patrols and fire fights. The annoying insects, the occasional monsoons and the abundance of drugs are all blended in with a war in which the real enemy oftentimes fought on the same side as you and in which the leaders didn't always have the best answers.

Almost everything in this movie is green, and almost everything that isn't is red. The uniforms are green, the jungle is green, the water is green, the cans of beans and the trucks are green. The body bags are green. The blood is red.

Perhaps most interesting is the abundance of normalcy in the movie. The American soldiers aren't portrayed as supermen, as in other movies, but rather as normal men, mostly undereducated, thrown into adverse situations. The heroism that manifests itself is always in response to situations, and often by men who probably wouldn't have done the same heroic act had they had time to think about it.

It would be easy for me to say that this is the best war movie ever made. I would rather say that this is the best war film I have ever seen. I have never been in the military, and I have never been to war, so I can't say that this is war as it really happened. But if this is what the Vietnam War was all about, and Pulitzer-Prize winning writer and former New York Times Vietnam correspondent David Halberstam agrees it is, then I feel lucky to have been born twenty years ago rather than forty years ago.

If you saw Rambo, and came away liking war, then see Platoon. And if you see Platoon, and come away liking war, then see a psychiatrist. We did not win the war in Vietnam, to no fault of the American soldiers who bravely fought there when their country called upon them, and we do not win the war in Platoon.

What we can win now is a better understanding f the war for ourselves and for future generations. ee the movie. You'll come away with a blank face, nd probably even a tear or two, but the educational xperience will be invaluable.

Busy student questions need for mandatory meal plan

•I have been spending the last three weeks trying to find out why everyone who lives on campus must purchase a meal plan.

School has been in session for two weeks and I have only eaten two meals in the cafeteria. I am unable to get any reimbursement for missed meals. Four days a week I miss lunch because of my class schedule and internship schedule.

The Director of Food Services insists that I must get a bagged lunch those four days. Anyone who has had one of those knows that they are hardly the ideal meal. I have eaten them twice and promised myself I would never submit myself to them again. Besides, all the interns and their supervisors go out to lunch together anyway. I am not about to bring my bagged lunch into a restaurant.

I also miss dinner twice a week due to the fact that I work second shift at a hospital. The university obviously does not recognize the needs of students who must work to pay for their education. I am also unable to be reimbursed for these meals.

I did not wish to purchase a meal plan at all this semester. I have talked to everyone possible, and they all said the meal plan is mandatory for anyone living on campus. You need a medical excuse to be let off the hook. I could have had my doctor write a letter but I decided to try the honest approach. Never again.

So I continue to search for the reason. Why do I pay $38 a week to eat on campus? Certainly not to eat bagged lunches. Could it be that the quality of the food is so poor that many would choose not to purchase a meal plan?

In the recent UConn newspaper sent out to our homes over break, (The University Chronicle), there was a long article on how good the food is here. If the university really believes that this food is good, why do they feel the need to force us to purchase it?

I only know that I have eaten two meals here this semester — two $38 meals! I can't believe this university is looking to make money off me.

Next year I will surely live off campus. I will be able to eat pretty well on $608 a semester.

Gay Awareness Week an important event

•World War II is not only remembered for the physical destruction of cities, but the atrocities toward humanity, particularly the mass genocide of the Jewish people. Hitler's Germany was full of horrors so great that even today those guilty of war crimes are sought out and prosecuted.

When one thinks of WWII, however, it is seldom realized the countless others imprisoned in the concentration camps. The gypsies, emigrants, Jehovah witnesses, "politicals,"and homosexuals were also sent to their deaths due to the mere fact that they were different. Each was assigned a special badge to wear so as to tell of their difference or "crime."An upside down triangle was sewn onto every prisoners uniform. The Jewish prisoners wore a yellow triangle (another triangle was later added to create David's star), brown for the gypsies, blue for emigrants, purple for Jehovah Witnesses, red for politicals, and a larger pink triangle for the homosexuals.

According to some sources, at the end of the war, the pink triangle prisoners were left to find their own way home.

Today, 42 years later, the lesbian and gay community is still wearing the pink triangle. Why? To remember. We must not forget our lesbian sisters and gay brothers who died because of who they were. We must always remember the past so as not to let it repeat itself.

Now, with the AIDS epidemic ever-increasing, we must be wary lest we be herded as if we are all diseased and a threat to society (such an idea was initiated by Lyndon LaRouche in California, however, was luckily defeated). We must not only show our remembrance of the past but our strength for the future. We must not hide our faces in fear or we shall fall to that very same fear and lose all we have fought for.

With this is mind I encourage you during Gay/Lesbian Awareness Week, February 9 - 13, to reevaluate your ideas for this is not only a lesbian/gay issue, buy one of the liberation of humanity.

World Party
Private Revolution
(Chrysalis)

The debut album for this new band from England prominently features Karl Wallinger, formerly of The Waterboys ("The Whole of the Moon"), who sings as well as plays guitar, bass, and some keyboards.

"Ship of Fools" has built a solid stance for World Party to stand on, but the expectations it garners for the rest of the album are slightly misleading. The rest of the album's tracks don't hold the listener's interest the way "Ship of Fools" does. Aside from the album's title track, the remaining tunes are of average level; quite suitable for casual listening, but disappointing for those who prefer instantly likable tunes.
Rating-6

Fetchin' Bones
Bad Pumpkin
(Capitol)

This follow-up to their year-old debut contains many of the same ingredients this quintet used to get such critical acclaim on their first album. Hope Nicholls' punkish vocals blended into a rash mix of new wave and folk music bring out the finer points of some otherwise outlandish tunes.
Rating-7

Various Artists
Jumpin' Jack Flash Soundtrack
(Mercury)

Based on The Rolling Stones' tune by the same name, this movie's soundtrack also includes that same tune, but not the remake recently released out by Tina Turner. Also included are contributions by Bananarama, Face to Face, and Billy Brannigan. "Misled" by Kool & The Gang is also included, as is The Supremes' classic "You Can't Hurry Love". The songs are a nice compillation, but are geared mostly towards the pop culture.

Thilo von Westernhagen & Band
Pleasureland
(Lifestyle)

Not quite fusion jazz, Thilo von Westernhagen and his backup band still inject a dose of radio rock into their instrumentals. Utilizing such instruments as saxophone, organ, drums, vibes, piano, and electric guitar, von Westernhagen comes out with jazz tunes that sound like they might at one time have been conceived as rock. An assortment of musicians accompany Thilo, and all keep pace in fine form.
Rating-8

Georgia Satellites
Georgia Satellites
(Elektra)

If Redneck Rock is ever going to make a comeback, it has some strong team members in the Georgia Satellites.

When "Keep Your Hands to Yourself" flooded the airwaves recently, opinions were voiced of how unusual this tune's induction was into present day radio. As "Battleship Chains" followed, Georgia Satellites proved to have the talent to be able to produce more than one-shot tunes with novelty appeal. Their southern rock sound is a pleasant differentiation from the amassed pop/new wave bands that concentrate their efforts more on copying each other than on making music. Still in need of some self-styled diversity, Georgia Satellite's debut album makes a strong dent in the future of radio rock, and even includes their version of (of all people) Rod Stewart's "Every Picture Tells A Story".
Rating-7

Toby Redd
In the Light
(Nemperor)

Detroit is known for its wholesome, untainted rock musicians, and the quartet known as Toby Redd has driven their hometown sound to an unusual bend in the musical road. Not only using the rockin' revelry that has gained Detroit its fame, they also add a strong mix of pop/progressive overtones to secure a somewhat similar sound to that of The Alarm (most prominently notable on the song "Looking for You"). The album's tracks show consistancy in sound, style, and quality, and show signs of success in the band's efforts to concoct this unusual combination.

Apple Hill Players talented to the core

By George Bex
Campus Correspondant

At first glance, it is easy to mistakenly call The Apple Hill Chamber Players just another string ensemble. After hearing them, however, it becomes quite clear that they belong in a class all their own. The seven members of this ensemble possess a special quality of artistry which places them a step above the rest.

The Apple Hill Chamber Players, who graced Jorgensen Auditorium yesterday afternoon, is one of New England's most critically acclaimed ensembles. From their wonderful artistic impression to their varied repertoire, they performed with a well-rounded blend of emotion and expertise.

This musical talent has not only been recognized by critics and audiences, but they've also been highly praised by their peers. Four members of The Apple Hill Chamber Players, performing as a piano quartet, reached the finals of the 1983 and 1984 Naumburg Competitions; chamber music's most coveted award.

In addition to their remarkable performing, The Players are also a major force in music education. Their summer music sessions at Apple Hill Farm offer hundreds of musicians the chance to study with and learn from the group.

Yesterday's performance was opened with Luig Boccherini's "String Quintet in C Major", a wonderfully imaginative piece, performed with rythmic accuracy and powerful emotion.

The second selection on the program, "Dark Tangos" by Tison Street, was written especially for them as a commission from The New England Presentors for their 1987 New England concert tour. The lyrical "Tango Melody", which weaves its way through this dream-like piece is indeed enchanting.

The concluding selection of the performance was Antonin Dvorak's "Piano Trio in F Minor, Opus 65". The ensemble's glorious imterpretation of this work ended the afternoon of music with grandeur.

The wonderful members of this ensemble are: Anthony Princiotti and Veronica Kadlubkiewicz (violin), Betty Hauck (viola), Paul Cohen (cello), Richard Hartshorne (double bass), and Eric Stumacher and Robert Merfeld (piano). All in all, The Apple Hill Chamber Players are truly talented to the core.

Elster will be performing his original compositions for marimba.

All programs are held at 60 Gold Street and are open to the general public as a ministry of Center Church. Reid leads North Carolina past Virginia, 74-73

By The Associated Press

Freshman center J. R. Reid scored 21 points, including a three-point play with 1:36 left in overtime, to boost third-ranked North Carolina to a 74-73 victory over Virgina Sunday.

Reid hit a jumper inside the lane to break a 71-71 tie and was fouled by Mel Kennedy. The free throw put North Carolina ahead 74-71, and John Johnson's basket with 47 seconds left pulled Virginia within a point.

Richard Morgan missed a jumper at the buzzer that could have given Virginia the victory.

North Carolina is now 20-2 and has not lost in nine Atlantic Coast Conference games. Virgina is 14-7 and 4-5.

In other games Sunday, No. 2 Indiana beat Michigan 83-67, and No. 18 Kansas beat Notre Dame 70-60, winning for the second time this weekend. The Jayhawks beat Oklahoma State 88-63 Saturday.

On Saturday, it was No. 1 Nevada-Las Vegas 83, San Jose State 74; No. 4 Iowa 89, Arizona 80; No. 5 DePaul 88, Dayton 65; No. 6 Temple 78, St. Joseph's 69; No. 7 Purdue 86, Northwestern 60; No. 8 Oklahoma 81, Missouri 78; Kentucky 70, No. 9 Alabama 69, and No. 10 Georgetown 89, Villanova 86.

Also, No. 12 Clemson 74, South Carolina 52; No. 13 Pittsburgh 87, No. 17 Providence 81; No. 14 Illinois 99, Wisconsin 74; No. 16 Duke 76, Maryland 67, and Georgia 75, No. 20 Auburn 71.

UNLV 83, San Jose St. 74

Freddic Banks scored 33 points and hit two 3-pointers in a 9-0 run that gave Nevada-Las Vegas a 63-60 lead and sent the Runnin' Rebels to their 23rd victory in 24 games. The Spartans had outscored UNLV 18-4 to take a 60-54 lead midway through the second half.

San Jose State trailed only 73-72 with 1:45 to play when Armon Gilliam hit the first of seven straight UNLV baskets. Gilliam wound up with 22 points.

Indiana 83, Michigan 67

Steve Alford scored 16 of Indiana's 22 points in an eight-minute run that carried the Hoosiers to a 41-29 halftime lead. Indiana, 19-2, built its lead to 17 points early in the second half, and Michigan never got closer than 10.

Alford had 30 points and is 15 points shy of Indiana's all-time record of 2,192 by Don Schlundt from 1952-55.

Iowa 89, Arizona 80

Kevin Gamble scored five of his 20 points in a 25-4 run that gave Iowa a 76-68 leaad with 6:06 to play. Gamble's three-point play with 7:49 left gave the 21-2 Hawkeyes a 69-68 lead. B.J. Armstrong started the run with a 3-point field goal, and Jeff Moe ended it with another 3-pointer.

DePaul 88, Dayton 65

Dallas Comegys had 15 points and 10 blocked shots, while Rod Strickland had 17 points for DePaul. The victory gave DePaul a 20-1 record and Coach Joey Meyer his first 20-victory season in three years since replacing his father.

DePaul scored 14 in a row after Dayton scored the first two points of the game and led by as many as 22.

Temple 78, St. Joseph's 69

Temple won its 10th straight game to go 23-2, getting 24 points from Nate Blackwell. The Owls have won 32 games in a row at McGonigle Hall.

St. Joseph's led 60-56 with 10:12 to play, but Temple scored 11 of the next 13 points.

Purdue 86, Northwestern 60

Purdue outscored Northwestern 13-2 over a 15-minute stretch in the first half to take a 23-10 lead in their Big Ten game. Troy Lewis scored 17 points and Todd Mitchell had 14 for Purdue, 18-3.

Purdue outscored Northwestern 21-5 over the first 12:33 of the second half to lead 67-25.

Oklahoma 81, Missouri 78

Tim McCalister hit his seventh 3-point field goal with six seconds left to lift Oklahoma over Missouri in the Big Eight. Derrick Chievous tied the score 78-78 for Missouri with 14 seconds left.

McCalister finished with 34 points for Oklahoma, 19-3, and his seven 3-pointers were the most in the Big Eight this season.

Alabama led 69-63 with less than two minutes left, but Davender hit two free throws that began a seven-point Kentucky run.

Georgetown 89, Villanova 86

Reggie Williams scored 21 points for Georgetown. While they never trailed in the second half, the Hoyas were unable to shake Villanova. Dwayne Bryant's two free throws with two seconds left gave Georgetown a three-point lead, and a shot from past midcourt by Villanova's Rodney Taylor at the buzzer sailed over the backboard.

Georgetown is 16-4.

Clemson 74, S. Carolina 52

Center Horace Grant scored 24 points despite missing the first 6:46 of play, to lead Clemson, 21-2. Grant had not practiced since Wednesday while battling the effects of the flu.

Pitt 87, Providence 81

...Huskies play well but lose

From back page

"Maybe we came into this game [against UConn] thinking it was going to be an easy game. If we were thinking that way, then we weren't properly prepared mentally to play basketball," he said.

Boeheim also found Syracuse's inside play lacking, especially on the boards.

"Either we're going to have to rebound better or we're going to end up struggling down the stretch," he said. "We are not going to be capable of winning many games if we continue to play the way we're playing."

On the other end of the court, Huskies Coach Jim Calhoun was encouraged by what he saw in his team, which despite shooting 37 percent for the game, was within four points of the Orangemen in the final minute.

"We played very hard. We know who we are and what we are. They [the players] gave me everything they could possibly have given me. The problem with our kids is that there's just not enough of them," said Calhoun, who lost two of his best players — forward Cliff Robinson and guard Phil Gamble — to academic suspension last month.

After building a 26-20 halftime advantage, Syracuse opened up its lead to 14 points, 34-20, scoring the first eight points of the second period.

Derrick Coleman's slam dunk at the 14:15 mark gave the Orangemen a 38-24 advantage, but the Huskies then went on a 10-0 tear of their own, capped by a pair of 3-point shots by Greg Economou and Tate George, who finished with 16 points.

A pair of foul shots by George with 9:55 to play left Syracuse with a 40-36 lead.

But Howard Triche hit a pair of free throws for the Orangemen and then Douglas hit a two-hand shovel shot on a drive and followed seconds later with a fast break layup to push Syracuse's lead back to 10 points, 46-36.

UConn came within four points, 57-53 , with 22 seconds to play on a three-point play by forward Jeff King. But Syracuse held off the Huskies, scoring its final seven points from the foul line.

Coleman finished with 14 points, Triche had 13 points and center Rony Seikaly finished with 10.

Seikaly played despite the kidnapping of his uncle by four gunmen in Beirut over the weekend.

"Mentally, I just wasn't out there. It was tough not to think about it," he said.

King had 14 points for the Huskies and Gary Besselink added 12 points and 15 rebounds.

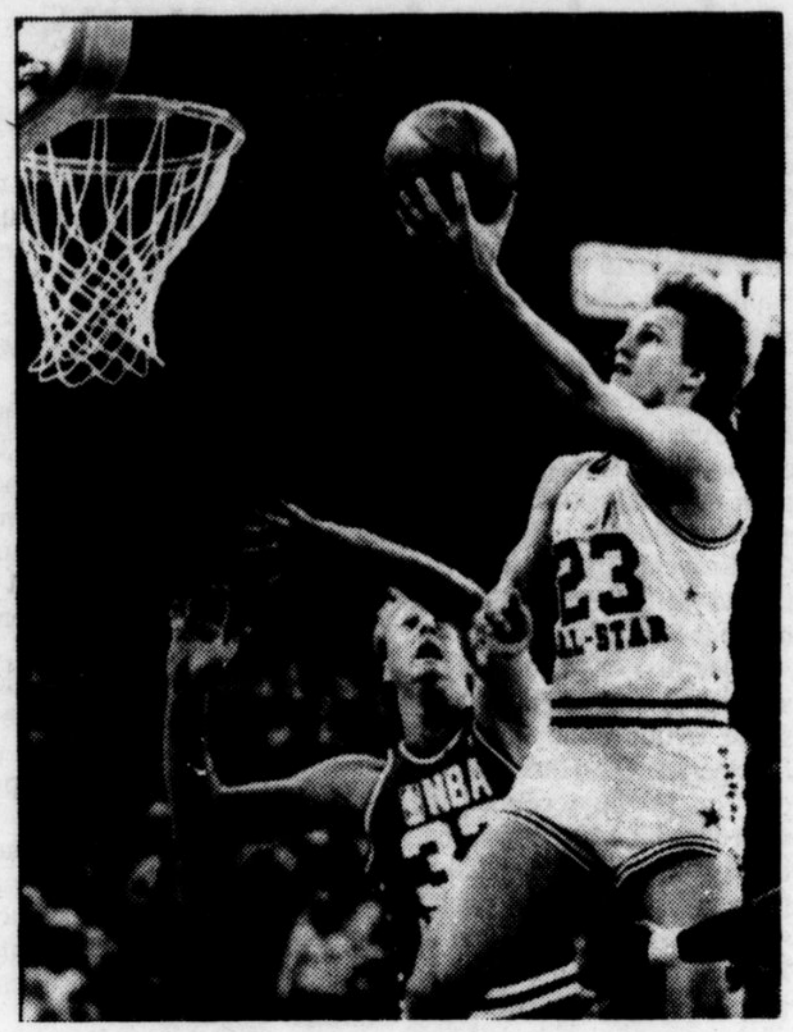
Chambers, Blackman lead West All-Stars to OT win



Seattle's Tom Chambers shoots over Boston's Larry Bird during Sunday's NBA All-Star game. Chambers was named the Most Valuable Player in the West's 154-149 overtime win (UPI photo).

SEATTLE (AP)—Tom Chambers won Most Valuable Player honors with 34 points and Rolando Blackman hit two pressure free throws at the end of regulation as the West beat the East 154-149 Sunday in the highest scoring all-star game in NBA history.

Blackman had 29 points for the West, which had lost the previous three overtime games in the 37-year history of the game.

Blackman scored four points in overtime, including the opening basket that gave the West the lead to stay at 142-140, as the West for only the second time in eight games. Chambers had four points in the overtime for the West, which still trails in the series 24-13.

The East's 154-145 overtime victory in 1984 at Denver was the previous highest scoring game. The West's 154 points tied the 1984 total for the most points by one team.

Blackman, who scored 10 points in the fourth quarter, hit two free throws with no time left in regulation to force the overtime.

Moses Malone had given the East a 140-138 lead with three seconds left on a tip-in of a missed shot by Kevin McHale.

The East seemingly had a safe lead at 128-116 with 5:40 left, but the West rallied as Chambers scored 10 points in 3:07 to cut the deficit to 136-135 with 2:01 remaining. Chambers had 14 points in the fourth period.

Malone led the East with 27 points and 18 rebounds, and he also helped the East foul out West starting center Akeem Olajuwon, who went to the bench in the first minute of overtime to become the first all-star since 1978 to be called for six personal fouls and only the second since 1971 to foul out.

James Worthy had 22 points for the West and Julius Erving 22 for the East in the 16th and final all-star game of his professional career. He played in five American Basketball Association All-Star games before moving to the NBA for 11 more, all as a starter.

Erving put himself into position as a possible MVP when he scored nine points in a four-minute span of the third quarter, keying a 42-point period that almost carried the East to victory.

The West started the second half with a five-point lead, but eight points by Larry Bird in the first five minutes, followed by Erving's spurt, gave the East a 96-87 advantage.

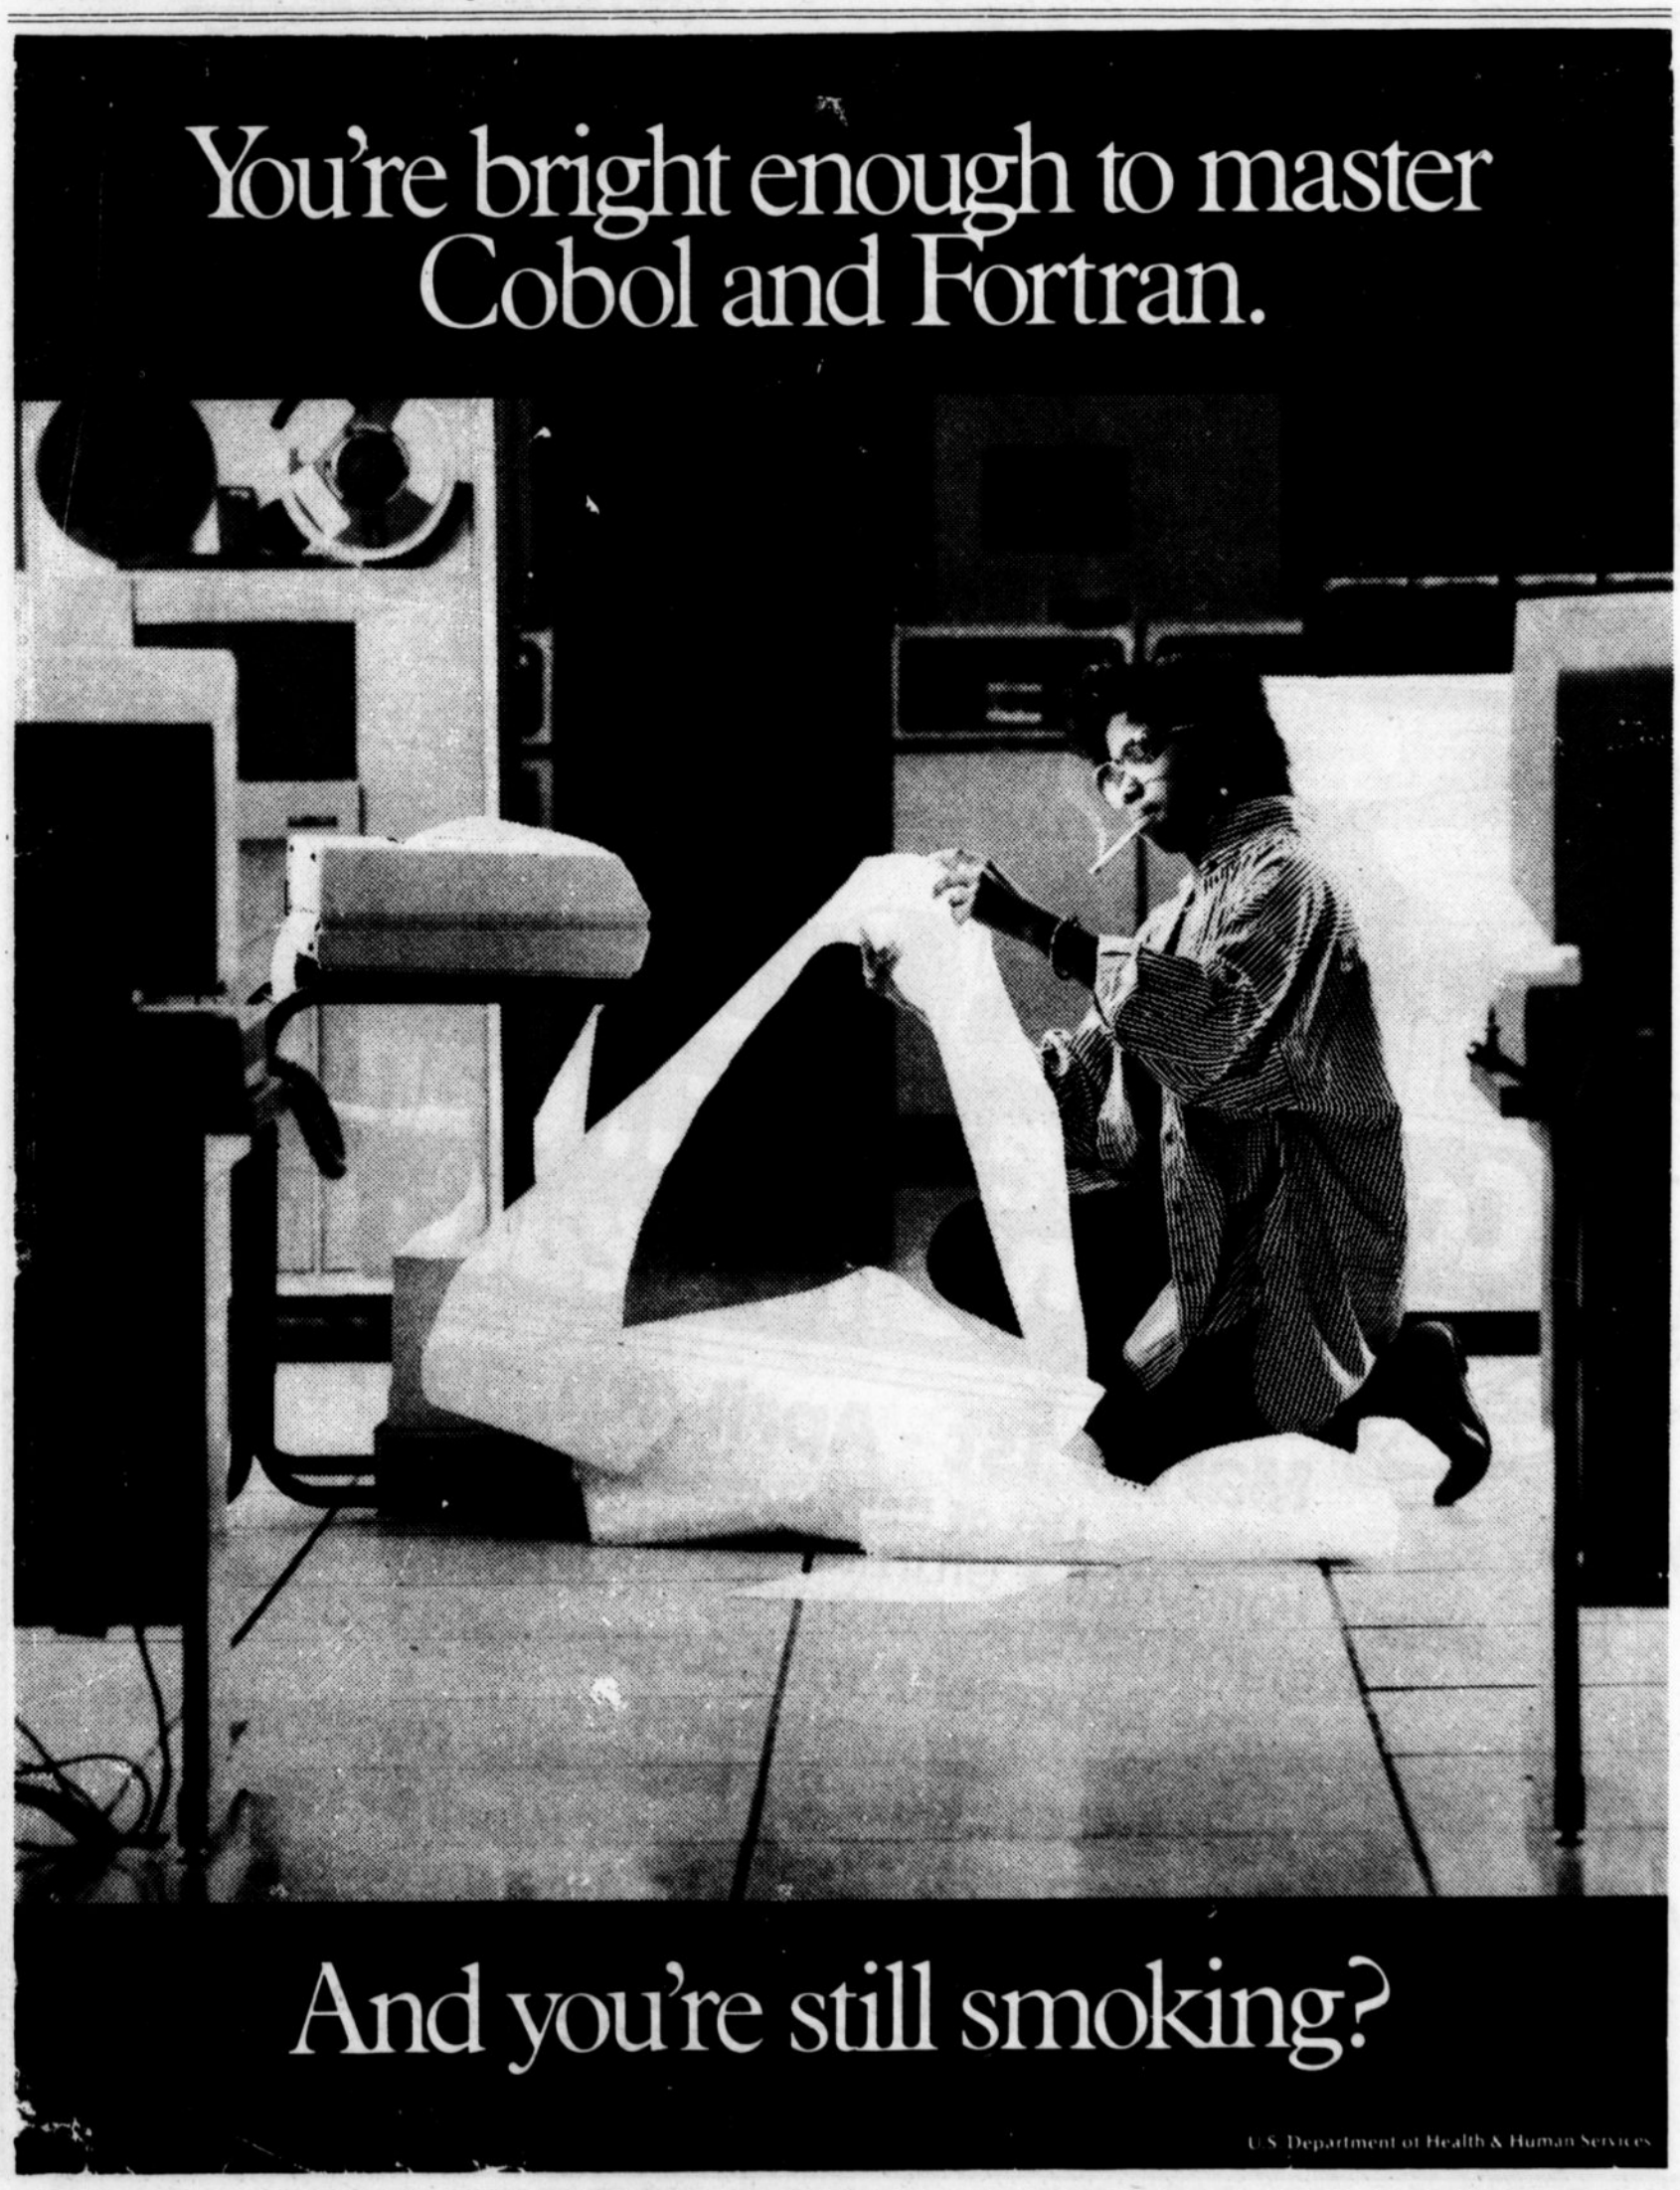
The East appeared to have the game under control until Chambers and Blackman carried the West down the stretch.

The West used hot streaks by three players while outscoring the East 41-32 in the second period.

After the East pulled ahead 37-31 in the first minute of the quarter, Golden State's Eric Floyd scored seven points in the next 1:28, sparking a 10-2 spurt that put the West ahead 41-39.

The East came back with six straight points for a four-point advantage, but Blackman of Dallas scored 11 of his 13 points in the period in the next three minutes as the West regained the lead 54-51.

James Worthy of the Lakers then scored eight points in the minute of the half, four of them on fast-break assists from Magic Johnson, giving the West a 70-62 margin. The West settled for a 70-65 halftime lead after Dominque Wilkins' three-point play with seven seconds to go.



Polo season winds down

While the rest of the sports world goes on with its normal routine, polo reaches the high point of its season. From Feb. 11-15, Cornell University will host the Eastern Regional Tournament. From there the top three teams will continue on to Los Angeles to compete against teams from all the across the country for the national title.

The women's team, consisting of senior Li Michalowicz, junior Lynn DeLambert and freshmen Mindy Long and Audrey Borowski, is seeded third behind Cornell and Virginia.

The men's team, made up of senior Bill Bradley, junior Kevin Cawood and freshman Geoff Broderick is seeded fourth in the region.

drew the puck back to Guagliardo at the point. Guagliardo beat RIT goalie Rob Rohlfs to the top right hand corner of the net with a slap shot from 45 feet.

Harry Geary increased UConn's lead to two with 1:36 left in the period. Chris Tripp beat an RIT defenseman to the puck in the Huskies zone and sent the puck up to Geary. Geary went in on goal, and scored with a shot from just inside the right circle.

In the first 10 minutes of the second period, RIT tied the score. After dominating the first period, the Huskies came out flat in the second. But with the scored tied, and half the game left, the Huskies turned their game back around.

At the end of the period the Huskies were dominating the play. They almost scored again when Krygier's shot from the point squeeked through Rohlfs' legs, but trickled wide. They finished the period with a two-man advantage that would continue into the final period.

"In the first 10 minutes of the second period we were flat," Coach Ben Kirtland said,"But in the second half we came back. It's encouraging to see that we can turn it around like that."

Brown capitalized on the Huskies power play just 37 seconds into the third period. With the RIT net being hammered at by Krygier and Geary, Brown finally fired a rebound home to put UConn up 3-2.

However, RIT's Chad Thompson then took over. Thompson scored two goals in the next seven minutes to put RIT up 4-3.

With just under 10 minutes left in the game, Brian Verrier took a rebound of Chuck Jancaterino's shot from the point and beat Rohlf to tie the score.

The teams played evenly for the next five minutes, until percentage dropped from 48.3 percent to 30 percent. As the game progressed UConn pannicked, forcing shots, getting out of the original game plan, and falling further behind.

Providence was red hot from the foul line, hitting 17 of 18 (94.4 percent) for the second half, and 26-29 (89.6 percent) overall. PC's last ten points were scored on foul shots, including eight points from Doris Sable. Meanwhile the Huskies, normally an excellent foul shooting team, shot 60 percent, with the biggest offender being Najarian who made only four of 11.

Providence coach Bob Foley saw an obvious weakness in UConn.

"Depth was key," he said."We had more depth."

"They had a better team," Auriemma said. "They had more fire power. We didn't shoot fouls well today and we are a good foul shooting team. We couldn't get into a flow.

"We did a good job defensively," he said. "The game plan was to make them shoot the ball from the outside. We wanted to keep them under 70 points.

"It would have been a different game with Heidi in there."

Najarian could have been affected by her hip that was bruised early in the first half. But she said it did not affect her.

"I'll live." she said. But she saw the inexperience of the Huskies as part of the problem.

"We panicked a little at the end and they showed poise."

She said the team was really psyched up for the game. "We really thought we would win today. We have to bounce back."

"The secret is whether we can bounce back. It puts us two games out of third not one," Auriemma said.

HUSKY NOTES: The loss breaks the Huskies four-game Big East winning streak and adds pressure to the remaining games, which include five Big East contests....Providence is No. 1 in the Big East in scoring, averaging 80.6 points per game. The smallest number of points PC has scored this season is 73, which occurred three times — against Syracuse, Boston College, and Seton Hall. In six games it has broke 100 points....PC was No. 1 in assists and No. 2 in free throws in the Big East coming into the game.

UConn was led by double winner senior Duncan Sikes, who scored victories in the 100 freestyle and the 200 breast stroke. Senior co captain Bob Bowes also had a good meet, coming in first in the 200 butterfly and second in both the 500 and 1,000 freestyle to the Owls Division II All-American Rich Enders. The Huskies also got a first place finish from freshman Matt Rossi in the 200 freestyle.

The Huskies have now lost their third meet in a row. Bowes says that things looked a lot better at the beginning of the year.

"When we started out the team looked very promising," said Bowes.

"We thought we had a chance to win the New England Regionals and maybe come in as high as third in the Big East Championships."

But injuries and academic problems have taken their toll.

Another problem for the team was the long semester break. The team had practices twice a day everyday. For the most part the team had to provide their own food and housing.

"A lot of guys couldn't afford to stay over break and they lost out on practice time," said Bowes.

Despite this Bowes remains confident.

"We should win our next two meets and then we'll be looking foward to the New Engalnds and the Big East Championships," Bowes said.

The Huskies next meet will be at home against Big East opponent Boston College, Friday at 7 p.m.

freshman Bill Tito put the Huskies up for good. Krygier took a shot, and Tito was able to poke the puck into the RIT net before Rohlfs was able to tie it up.

In the final minutes of the game, UConn goalie J.T. Marcoux made four big saves to preserve the victory.

"J.T. played great," Krygier said. " He's been flat but he's starting to peak now. This is definately the best J.T. has played all year. Definitely the best."

The game was one of the toughest that the Huskies have played all season. It was also their best victory.

"The game was what I expected," Kirtland said. "Although I certainly couldn't have expected us to play the way we did. We needed a consistant effort and we got that."

Saturday night against North Adams State, Tito scored his second game winning goal in two nights. Brown also added a hat trick and Marcoux registered another fine game in turning back 27 shots.

UConn doesn't play again until next Saturday when it hosts New England College. The Huskies can not afford to lose, if they want to keep their playoff hopes alive.

"There is no tommorrow if we lose," Krygier said.

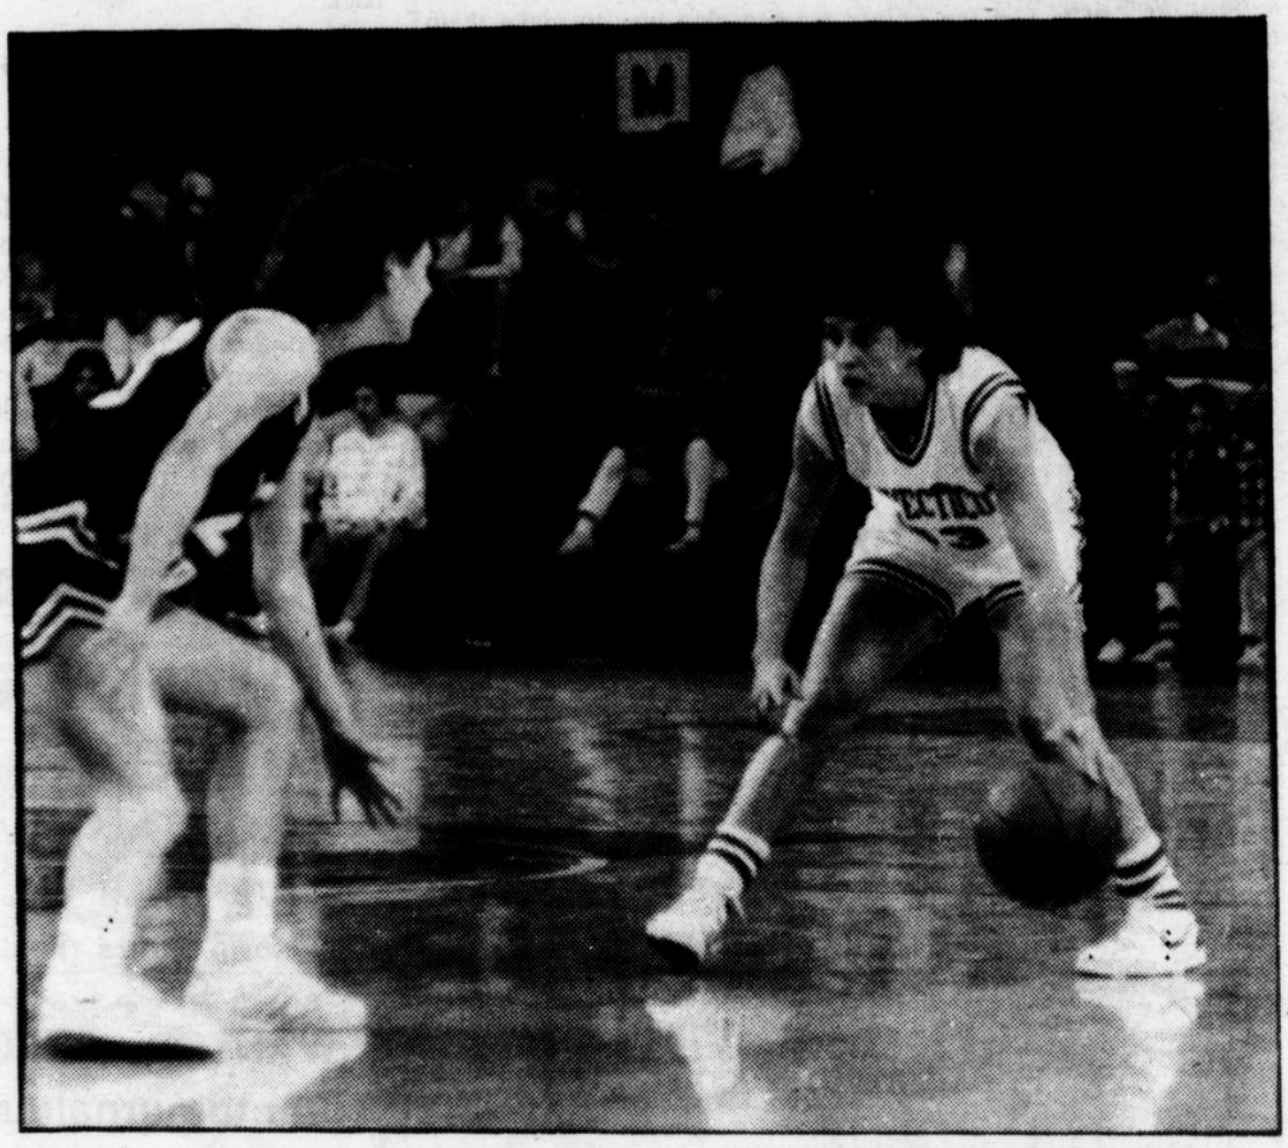
Huskies limp to 76-67 loss

Injuries to Robbins, Najarian prove costly



UConn guard Jill Brumbaugh drives past Providence's Doris Sable in Saturday's game. Providence won, 76-67 (Dan Dennehy photo).

By Kristen Kelleher
Daily Campus Staff

Coach Geno Auriemma was prepared for Saturday's women's basketball game against Providence. He was prepared to meet the No. 1 scoring team in the Big East. Prepared to handle Providence's Mary Burke, who is second in the Big East in scoring. Prepared to pull off an upset.

But his preparations did not include allowing Heidi Robbins to get injured with four minutes left in the first half. And without Robbins, his strategy could not work.

UConn lost the game 76-67, dropping its record to 10-10 overall and 6-5 in the Big East.

Auriemma knew that Providence's defense would center around Renee Najarian, who is third in the Big East in scoring and first in rebounding. But more importantly, she is the player that the Huskies rely on. When Najarian is double teamed, it is Robbins who is supposed to carry the offense.

This response to Providence's defense worked effectively, with the Huskies keeping pace for much of the first half. Robbins scored the Huskies' first seven points, although she went scoreless for the rest of the game. UConn's lead stretched to as much as five points until 10 minutes into the first half when Providence's Doreen Furguson scored and converted a three-point play, putting her team up 16-15.

Neither team led by more than three points for the entire rest of the half. There were eight lead changes and five ties, as both teams scrapped for every point.

With the Huskies behind 25-24, Robbins went up for a rebound and came down wrong, straining a muscle in the back of her right leg. Auriemma later said it was not a serious injury, but it was serious enough to keep Robbins out of the rest of the game and put the Huskies in a bind.

Najarian scored 19 of her 22 points in the first half, despite bruising her left hip early in the game.

But in the second half the Huskies pulled a personality switch. Suddenly the ball was out of Najarian's hands. The Huskies' field goal

Huskies hang tough; Syracuse wins by 6

SYRACUSE, N.Y. (AP)—Syracuse University, approaching its tenth 20-win season in 11 years, keeps winning basketball games, but that doesn't mean the 11th-ranked Orangemen are happy about their recent performances.

"If you are a basketball player you should be ready to play," said Syracuse Coach Jim Boeheim after the Orangemen posted an uninspired 59-53 Big East Conference win over UConn Saturday night to raise their record to 19-3. "Obviously, we weren't as sharp as we have to be."

Syracuse, which was held to its lowest offensive output in two seasons by the Huskies, 2-8 and 8-13, will need to be sharper Monday night.

The Orangemen travel to Pittsburgh to play the 13th-ranked Panthers with the lead in the Big East on the line. The two teams are tied for first with 8-2 records.

"We might have been looking past [Saturday's game] to Pitt, it was a long night," said guard Sherman Douglas, who paced Syracuse with 16 points.

"We had no movement inside. We were standing still wondering what to do," said the sophomore playmaker. "It was something we were doing in the first part of the season but right now, at this stage of the season, it's too late for that."

"There are a lot of things we have to get corrected before the Pitt game. If not, we are going to be in for a long night like last time," said Douglas, recalling Syracuse's 84-70 loss to the Panthers at the Carrier Dome two weeks ago. It was the only game this season in which the Orangemen trailed throughout the contest.

Boeheim said his club needs to rediscover its intensity, something it has lacked while going 4-3 in its last seven games after reeling off 15 consecutive wins.

Southern swimmers win

The men's swimming team put up a tough fight Saturday but lost to a powerful Southern Connecticut State University squad 122-94. The loss drops the Huskies record to 7-6 while the Owls go to 8-1.

UConn got the strong effort it needed, but lacked the depth necessary to beat a team like Southern.

UConn Coach Peter McDevitt was pleased with the team's performance. Unfortunately, he is hampered by the Huskies depleted roster.

"We're operating the best we can under the present conditions," said McDevitt.

UConn, Yale take titles

NEW HAVEN — The UConn women's and Yale University men's track and field teams each repeated as Connecticut Intercollegiate Indoor Champions Saturday afternoon.

The UConn women's team was paced by double winner Mary Kennen who posted firsts in the high (5' 8") and long (18' 1 1/2") jumps. The victorious Yale men's team was led by middle distance specialist Pat Swift who posted victories in the 1500 (3:52.06) and 800 (1:51.80) meter runs.

Overall, Yale had five men's winners while the UConn women relied on point scoring in each of the 13 events. UConn freshman Angela Corson was the meet's leading scorer with 23 points, placing among the top six in five events.

Hockey team earns two big wins

By Joshua Hoffman

The hockey team went into this weekend with a lot to prove. They had to prove that they could play their best and win when they had to. And they needed to show that they really had all this "potential" that they've talked about all year.

In two victories Friday and Saturday nights the Huskies proved all they needed to prove.

At home Friday night, the Huskies beat the heavily favored Rochester Institute of Technology 5-4. They then traveled to North Adams State, and registered an impressive 8-1 victory Saturday night.

The wins bring their record in the Eastern Collegiate Athletic Conference to 8-8-2. They will have to win two of their remaining three ECAC games to keep their record above .500 and be elligible for the playoffs.

Friday night, against RIT, the Huskies jumped out to a 2-0 lead in the first period. This is one of the few games this season in which they scored first and it boosted the teams confidence.

"Scoring early definately set the tempo for the game," senior Todd Krygier said. "We didn't know if we were prepared until we stepped on the ice. But after we scored a couple we knew we could beat them."

Freshman defenseman John Guagliardo put the Huskies ahead just over eight minutes into the game. RIT took a penalty and there was a faceoff in their zone. Center Tim Brown took the faceoff and
